Michael Posner

Posner is a shareholder at Ward, Damon, Pheterson & Bleau, a boutique real estate and commercial litigation law firm in West Palm Beach, Fla. He is also the foremost collector of instant cameras in the United States.

Starting with a used camera he bought for $3 at a sidewalk sale in 1981, Posner has amassed a collection of instant cameras that fills 10 five-foot shelves in his office.

- I have every model Polaroid made in the United States; 1948 was the first one. The first department store that sold them was Jordan Marsh in Boston. The earlier ones were made of metal with leatherette covers and folding bellows of a cloth-type material and weighed about 2.5 pounds.

- I have the First Model 95. I also have Tasmanian Devil and Hello Kitty instant cameras.

- I just got a Macro 5 dental Camera. It's big with grips on both sides and two flashes. It can take really close-up pictures.
